

Lee May

Lee N. May II is a former elected official in DeKalb County, Georgia. Lee was first elected as a Commissioner in 2006. He served in that role until he was appointed Interim Chief Executive Officer of DeKalb County by Georgia Governor Nathan Deal in 2013.

Lee is also a graduate from Emory University's Candler School of Theology holding a Masters of Divinity Degree, and of the historic Clark Atlanta University with a degree in Business.

Lee May is a former small business owner, having owned an independent movie theater located in Lithonia, GA. He is also the author of "My God, My Politics: A Discussion on Faith and Politics". May uses his personal experiences in both worlds to bring clarity for the layperson, telling them that their faith, in fact, can and should inform their politics. May tells writes that, "people of faith have every right to inject their faith into the political discourse of this nation."

While he has pursued many different areas of passion in business and politics, Lee knew deep down that there was a draw to full-time ministry. In 2017, Pastor Lee answered that call and with his wife Robin (and a small yet powerful team), Transforming Faith Church was launched in the heart of DeKalb County, Georgia. The ministry is committed to helping people experience transformation in every area of their lives.

Lee most enjoys spending time with his college sweetheart Robin and their 3 children, Ryann, Reagan and Riley.
